FEATURE NAME	DEFINITION
Corrected	Leather is buffed to reduce and conceal natural markings or blemishes.
Embossed	A print applied in the finishing process, like a stamp, to create a unique look or hide imperfections.
Semi-Aniline	Offers good medium protection for day-to-day use. Semi-aniline leather may be slightly buffed, but no pattern or embossing has been used to alter the texture.
Aniline	Regarded as the highest quality of leather, as it is often seen as the most authentic. Full aniline leather will show all natural marks, grain and colour variation, as well as easily show scuffs, scratches and general wear.
Pigmented	Leather with a coating of coloured pigments to improve durability and ensure even colour.
Solid Colour	Colour is uniform through the hide and does not often have variation.
Two-Tone	Consistent colour variation throughout the hide.
Pull-Up	Aniline leather made with a special combination of oils and waxes creating a dark color that drastically changes shades at points of stress or when pulled during the upholstery process.
Nubuck	Top grain leather that has been brushed or buffed to provide a tactile and velvety textured finish.
Develops Patina	Leather will develop a soft sheen and colour variation that develops beautifully over time, generally in areas that get the most use like seats or back cushions.
Natural Markings	Markings such as healed scars, fat wrinkles, cuts, or brand marks may occur in 100% top grain leather.
Colour Variation	Semi-aniline and aniline leathers can have slight colour variation as pieces can be cut from different parts of the hide, or from different lots. This is not a material defect, but evidence that it is a natural product.
Soap & Water Cleanable	Clean with a mild soap and water solution, and wipe with a damp clean cloth. Do not saturate the leather.
Water Cleanable	Clean with a slightly damp cloth and immediately wipe with a dry cloth. Do not use any type of soap. Do not saturate the leather.
Repels Liquid	Water beads to be easily wiped away before penetrating the leather.
Stain Resistant	This leather resists stains from spills and dirt.
Available with Match	This leather offers a compatible leather match option.
Certified Sustainability	The manufacturer of this leather has passed a set of certifications that promote sustainable development and environmental management practices in the industry.
